Human Rights Praxis and the Struggle for Survival

William T. Armaline, Davita Silfen Glasberg

Asserting a critical sociological perspective, Human Rights Praxis and the Struggle for Survival reveals the contested historical processes through which fundamental human needs are constructed as “rights” under international law, and how those rights are confronted by the ruling relations and crises inherent to contemporary global capitalism and the waning American hegemonic world order. Human Rights Praxis and the Struggle for Survival offers critical analysis of contemporary politics and options for students, scholars, organizers, and stakeholders to grapple with some of the most pressing social problems of human history.

“What could be more important than a universal human rights praxis at a time when humanity faces multiple existential threats and fascism is resurgent? Armaline and Silfen Glasberg lay out the urgency of the historic moment from a critical sociological perspective. “Overlapping threats to human survival” are rooted in the runaway crises of global capitalism and the enormous power that transnational capital wields over states and peoples. A global working-class movement fighting for a democratic eco-socialism is our best, and perhaps only hope for the future. Theoretically perspicacious yet written with passion and commitment, this is a book for and about our turbulent times. It should be widely read in and out of the academy.”

William I. Robinson, Distinguished Professor of Sociology and Global and International Studies, Latin American, and Iberian Studies, University of California-Santa Barbara; Author of Can Global Capitalism Endure (Clarity Press) and The Global Police State (Pluto Press).

“A world careening from crisis to crisis among nations and social divisions within nations, confronted by multiple wars based on leaders’ historic miscalculations, and threatened by expressions of white supremacy, fascism, holocausts and urgent mass migrations literally screams the need for daring books of social criticism. A new global economy is replacing an old one. The former is much more eager to adjust than the latter. This book offers powerful insights that might help us all navigate the truly dangerous times emerging.”

Richard D. Wolff, Professor Emeritus of Economics, University of Massachusetts; Founder/Director of Democracy at Work and Host of Economic Update.
